DUST SIFTS DOWN ON CITY

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

TEXTILE mill owners who yesterday were rebuffed by President Roosevelt when they asked for repeal of the cotton processing tax announced today that they would seek action in the congress. The president is right and the mill owners are wrong. The president may be wrong in advocating crop reduction, but as long as we follow the policy of paying farmers to reduce cotton acreage the whole cotton trade must pay for it.

City Appeal Cases Defeated by Juries in Circuit Court

O. L. Harper, of Hope, Acquitted on Charge of Possessing Liquor

SUNDAY VIOLATIONS

Case of Half Dozen Market Operators Ends in Hung Jury

A majority of the appeal cases from Hope municipal court were dismissed for lack of evidence or the defendants won acquittal after standing trial, a review of Hempstead circuit court proceedings revealed Thursday.

Defendants who had cases pending in court for violation of prohibition laws, won acquittal in several instances. Others were fortunate enough not to be indicted by the grand jury.

In a few cases, however, defendants who had whisky charges pending against them before the state liquor law was repealed, were found guilty and given suspended sentences.

The appeal cases from Hope municipal court showed:

O. L. Harper, possessing liquor, not guilty.

Marion Daugherty, transporting liquor, not guilty.

The trial of half a dozen Hope meat market operators, all charged with selling meat on Sunday, resulted in a hung jury.

Roy Nevins, drunkenness, another appeal case, resulted in a mistrial.

Joe B. Trotter and Henry Witherspoon were acquitted on charges of burglary and grand larceny.

With most of the cases disposed of, circuit court was expected to adjourn Thursday or Friday.

Two Blytheville Firemen Injured

Brick Wall Crashes on Five—Spectators Aid in Digging Them Out

BLYTHERVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—A brick wall fell on five firemen fighting a downtown blaze Thursday, seriously injuring two of them.

All were removed to hospitals.

The most seriously injured were: Joe Williams, skull fracture and severe burns; Jimmy Williams, volunteer, broken leg and shattered foot.

The blaze did $10,000 damage to two stores.

Whole System of Railroads and Entire City Had First to Be Constructed in Desert Before Dam Was Begun

BOULDER CITY, Nev.—Imagine one continuous freight train with its engine in St. Louis and its caboose in New York City—a distance of 1,065 miles.

That will give you an approximate picture of the number of carloads of materials necessary to complete Boulder Dam.

If the United States Bureau of Reclamation had deliberately searched for a more inaccessible spot to build the world's biggest dam, it couldn't have done much better than to select Black Canyon on the Colorado river.

It chose this spot, of course, through geographic expediency; but it became hide-and-seek for the material men and the transportation committee. Nobody had thought to build a city near the site of Boulder Dam. Nearly all the white inhabitants of the region lived in communities not dozens, but hundreds of miles away.

City Has Magical Rise

The first thing necessary, therefore, was to build some railroads and then to build a town. This was done in

Flying Debris of Far West Drops Down on Arkansas

Dust as Fine as Varnish Coats Furniture and Autos in Hope

IT BLANKETS STATE

Paradox of Dust Storm Moving on Heels of Rain Into Drenched Area

The earth of the Far West blown 1,000 miles sifted down upon Hope Thursday morning in a fine dust that blotted out the sun and created a weird twilight at noon.

It was the paradox of a dust storm visiting a country drenched with rain. This has been a wet spring for Arkansas. The rainstorm which ended Wednesday night made the total precipitation in Hempstead county this far in April 1.68 inches, the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station reported—but when the rain ceased Wednesday night the dust began falling Thursday morning.

Apparently the dust had been riding high up in the atmosphere, and was precipitated by the recent electrical storms going on below.

Fine as Varnish

The dust was so fine it seemed to be a graphite or varnish, covering automobiles and furniture with a slick, gray layer. Tightly-shut doors and windows made no difference—the dust sifted through. It made breathing difficult as Hope's population moved about town, fine dust clogging the nostrils.

The experiment station's crop experts reported, however, there was no likelihood of damage on Hempstead county's fields. The dust has been all the heavier particles which build up, sensational damage reports in the Far West were far behind hundreds of miles before this strange "fog" settled to earth in Arkansas.

Hope householders reported Thursday noon that the dust settled at an astonishing rate. Furniture would be wiped clean—only to be covered all over again 10 minutes later.

All Over Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The dust storm plaguing the Western states moved into Arkansas Thursday.

The Weather Bureau reported that a thick haze covered the entire state. Part of it moved to Memphis and into Mississippi. It was forecast to remain throughout the day.

The haze was heavy enough in the morning to partly blot out the sunlight. The dust clouds sifted into homes here leaving a thick coating.

Fayetteville reported high winds brought in waves of dust Wednesday night, covering houses and automobiles. The storm subsided and dust was only visible at a distance Thursday.

At Texarkana clouds of dust accompanied a stiff northwest wind. Sunlight was obscured and dust was sprinkled lightly over the streets, buildings and automobiles.

Dust was reported at Memphis, Tenn., and Shreveport, La.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A new and bitter conflict over the cotton processing tax was in the making Thursday.

After President Roosevelt made it plain he had no intention of removing the tax by paying the farmers out of the 1-billion-dollar relief fund the cotton textile industry and its congressional supporters rallied for a fight against the tax.

Highway Checks in U. S. Tax Trial

Political Worker Testifies Against Accused Long Henchman

NEW ORLEANS, La. — (AP) — Adolis Creppel of Lafayette, La., testified Tuesday that State Representative Joseph Fisher, on trial in federal district court here for alleged income tax evasion, had "given him $30 every 15 days to campaign for Gov. O. K. Allen in Jefferson parish in the fall of 1931," when Allen was running for governor.

Creppel was shown a check of State Highway Commission checks made out to him during that period, and said he had not written the endorsement on the backs of the checks and had never seen them before.

Creppel testified that he had worked for the highway commission in the early part of 1929 for about two months and had been employed by the commission recently but that he was not working for the highway commission in 1931 or 1932. Two of the four years under which Fisher is charged with attempting to evade income tax.

Allen was chairman of the highway commission when he announced for governor.

Evidence that Representative Fisher signed receipts for $11,135 which the government charged he received in 1929 from the Gulf Shell company as commission and profit from clam shell contracts were produced by the government.

The government previously had offered seven checks issued in 1929 by the Gulf Shell company payable to cash but these checks did not bear Fisher's endorsement and the prosecution sought to show by testimony of Roland A. Thomas, secretary-treasurer of the Gulf Company, that Fisher received the money.

At the time the checks were introduced along with a batch made directly to Fisher and endorsed by him, Thomas told the jury that he was unable to produce vouchers or the checks or receipts showing that Fisher got the money.

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Questions Gauge Your Health Knowledge

Health knowledge is the kind of information you should have immediately available in times of emergency. During the last 10 years it has become a significant part of the teaching in most schools.

In a recent survey of freshmen entering the University of Michigan, an attempt was made to find out to what extent the health knowledge given to pupils in high school had been assimilated. The modern method of testing provides the offering of a question with five possible answers, so that the student may indicate which answer is correct.

The first question was: Goiter is not now so prevalent in Michigan because (1) doctors have removed them; (2) climatic changes; (3) the use of iodized table salt; (4) the goiters are not being diagnosed; (5) more tonsils are removed.

The right answer is No. 3. It has been found that small amounts of iodine in the food are important in the prevention of simple goiter.

Surgeons have removed goiters that were a menace to health. These, however, are in most instances not simple goiters, but exophthalmic goiters, which overstimulate the body, due to overactivity of the thyroid.

It has not been shown that climate affects the incidence of goiter, nor does the removal of tonsils.

Another question was: The proper first aid treatment of a finger cut is: (1) Soak it. (2) Put powder on it. (3) Let it bleed some, then elevate it and allow it to seal up with a blood clot. (4) Wash it with tap water. (5) Cover it with court-plaster moistened with saliva.

Almost everybody knows now that sucking a finger that has just been cut, or covering it with a plaster moistened with saliva, would be exceedingly bad treatment. Washing it off with tap water is hardly safe, because tap water may contain germs, although probably the menace of health would be slight.

It would not be so serious to put peroxide on the cut finger, except that peroxide, when strong actually destroys tissue.

The correct method is to let the blood flow to carry out any infection; then coagulation will seal the wound and promote healing. Most doctors still believe, however, in the application of a mild antiseptic.

The third question was: The proper first aid for turning the ankle is: (1) Walk on it. (2) Manipulate it. (3) Complete rest and elevation. (4) Swab it with liniment. (5) Paint it with iodine.

It is bad for injured tissues to subject them to pressure, so that walking on the injured ankle or manipulating it would certainly be bad for it. Nothing is gained by rubbing a sprained ankle with liniment or by painting it with iodine. The right step is to elevate the foot and rest it so as to give the tissue opportunity to recover.

The doctor who is called to see a sprained ankle secures rest for these tissues by application of strips of adhesive tape or by suitable splinting or bracing.

A fourth question was: The most certain way to recover from a cold is: (1) Take a cathartic. (2) Take a good workout. (3) Go to bed. (4) Cut down on food. (5) Gargle the throat.

There is no reason why one who has a cold should take a cathartic, since this has nothing to do with a cold, but simple enemas are helpful. A person with a cold is sick and should not indulge in overactivity.

Most persons who are sick will cut down on food without having this done for them, but as long as the bowels and digestion are working satisfactorily, there is no reason for cutting down on food with a cold.

Gargling the throat, under the best of circumstances, merely puts a fairly pleasant taste in the mouth and washes accumulated secretions away.

Therefore, the right answer as to what to do to recover from a cold is, first of all, to go to bed. Given a reasonable chance to recover under such circumstances, the body will probably do so.

Inspection of more than 4,200,000 motor vehicles in 1934 showed that 69 per cent, or more than two cars out of three, had defective lighting equipment.

Tells How China Met Crisis in the Past—History Shows Land Rising Above Many Disasters

China's amazing capacity for survival is stressed in "The Four Hundred Million," by Mary A. Nourse. This book, subtitled "A Short History of China," tells China's story from the legend-wreathed prehistoric past to the present moment, and when you read it you are deeply impressed by the way in which that sprawling nation has met crisis after crisis and surmounted disaster after disaster.

Is China splitting apart today into independent principalities under robber barons? The same thing happened before—way back in the days before London and Paris had taken shape—and the Chinese found their way out of the mess.

Is the land being overrun by foreign conquerors? That, too, has happened before. Genghis Khan conquered China and set up his own dynasty, and it sank out of sight. The Manchus conquered China and set up their dynasty and it, too, vanished. Will the Japanese be any different?

Time seems to fight for the Chinese; time add a strange, irresistible momentum arising from a tremendous national vitality. Looking at the present situation in the light of Chinese history, you get the feeling that four or five centuries hence this crisis will be recorded as just another incident in a long, long story.

This book makes very interesting reading. Chinese history is an unfamiliar story to most Americans. It's well worth study.

Published by Bobbs-Merrill, the book sells for $3.50.

Flood Control for St. Francis

Engineer Urges Reservoir System Under Mississippi Plan

WASHINGTON, — (AP) — Harry N. Pharr, engineer of the St. Francis Levee District in Arkansas, urged the house flood control committee Tuesday night to include a reservoir system for flood control on the St. Francis.

Construction of three reservoirs in the upper St. Francis basin, he said, would solve largely the problem of lateral drainage and backwater floods in the area along the lower river extending 105 miles upstream from the point where the St. Francis enters the Mississippi.

The automotive sales group of the nation, not including manufacturing, employed one of every six persons on the payroll of all business in 1933.

The DARK BLOND

By CARLETON KENDRAKE © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MILICENT, a secretary to GEORGE DRINGOLD, had her employer in his office dead. Millicent had a notebook in which Dringold had begun to dictate a confession. In panic she rushes away, registers at a hotel under an assumed name.

JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a beauty. Then he takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She accepts his plan.

That night a note under her door informs Millicent, "The woman in black came to see me." Millicent sees the woman in black drive away and decides to run away. She walks home, enters the chauffeur's quarters and finds him dead. She is stopped by Mrs. Hupp, who shouts, "Arrest that woman!"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

SERGEANT MAHONEY stepped forward and said, "Just a minute, Mrs. Hupp. What is it you were trying to say?"

"This girl," she said, pointing to Millicent, "is the one who threw the keys into the pond at the base of the fountain."

"How do you know?"

"I saw her."

"Are you willing to swear that you saw her throw the keys?"

"Well, I saw her leaning out of the window, and there was a splash in the fish pond."

"Did you see her leaning out of the window before or after the splash in the fish pond?"

"Look here," she said in her most imperious manner, "you can't cross-examine me in this way. I'm telling you what I saw, and I don't want my word questioned."

"I'm not questioning your word," Sergeant Mahoney told her. "I'm only trying to get at the facts of the case. Now, where were you when this happened?"

"I was in the yard."

"Did you see her lean out of the window before or after the splash?"

"It was afterwards."

"You heard the splash?"

"Yes."

"And then what did you do?"

"Then I looked up and saw this young woman leaning out of the window."

"How did you know she had thrown the keys into the pond?"

"I felt certain of it."

"Why?"

"Because of the expression on her face and because I had reason to believe she was the one driving Bob's coupe that night."

"What were your reasons for thinking that?"

"Because her clothes were muddy."

"Who told you that?"

"Vera Duchene, my maid."

MAHONEY shifted his gaze to Millicent. "What have you to say to this?" he asked.

"Nothing."

Sergeant Mahoney gravely took Millicent by the arm. "May I ask where you were going?" he inquired.

"I was just going out."

Sergeant Mahoney turned her back toward her own room. "I think," he told her, "you and I will have a little chat."

Millicent did not turn her head, but walked steadily down the corridor to her room. Sergeant Mahoney followed her, stood at one side to let her enter, smiled a polite but somewhat rosy dismissal at Mrs. Hupp, then closed the door and, when Millicent had seated herself in a chair, perched himself on the edge of her bed.

"You were out last night?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Did you have Bob Caise's car?"

"Does it make any great difference?"

"It may."

"Very well then, I had it."

"Why did you have it?"

"I was trying to follow an automobile."

"What automobile?"

"It was a sedan. The license number was 9J3410."

"Where did you see this automobile?"

"It left the garage."

"At what time?"

"I don't know. It was some time during the night."

"And you tried to follow it?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because I was interested in finding out to whom it belonged and where it was going."

"Who was driving it?"

"I don't know."

"A man or a woman?"

"A woman."

"And you didn't follow this sedan to its destination?" he asked after a moment.

"No."

"Why?"

"Because the car I was driving ran out of gas."

"And then you returned home?"

"Yes."

HE frowned for a moment, and said almost mutely, "You had the keys from the car. You used one of the keys to unlock the front door and let yourself in. Is that right?"

"Yes."

"And you did throw the keys into the fish pond?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't you tell me this before?"

"Because I was afraid to."

"Did you hear any shot in the direction of the chauffeur's quarters?"

"No."

"Did you see anyone near the chauffeur's place?"

"No."

"Did you talk with the chauffeur?"

"No."

"Did you shoot him?"

"No."

He stared at her moodily. "I think," he said, "you were running away just now."

"What if I was?"

"It would have been a very bad thing to do. The police would have caught you, and your flight would have been almost a certain sign of guilt."

Sergeant Mahoney watched her speculatively for a few moments, then took from his pocket a small automobile.

"Did you ever see this before?" he asked.

"Good heavens, no!" she said. "It extended to her—the butt toward her."

"Take it," he said.

She started to reach for it, then instinctively recoiled from the weapon. "I don't want to touch it."

He reached across and placed it on the table by her right hand.

"That gun," he said, "is fully loaded."

"Will it go off?"

"Not unless you shoot it."

"Why should I shoot it?"

"I am giving it to you," he said.

"So that if you want to make your escape, you can take this gun and get out."

KNUCKLES sounded imperatively on the door. Sergeant Mahoney glanced at Millicent and called, "Who's there?"

"Detective Buchanan."

"Come in, Buchanan."

The door opened and Buchanan pushed his way into the room. "I've got something!" he exclaimed.

"Got what?" Sergeant Mahoney asked him.

"Some woman was in Harry Felding's room last night. She was probably the one who fired the shot."

"How do you know?"

"I found a whisky flask in the bathroom. There were fingerprints on it. I've brought out those latent fingerprints with powder and I'm satisfied they're the prints of a woman's fingers."

"Where was this whisky flask?"

"In the bathroom."

"Did the woman drink the whisky out of the flask or out of a tumbler?" Sergeant Mahoney asked.

"Out of a tumbler."

"Any fingerprints on the tumbler?"

"They were rather badly smudged. I couldn't develop a clear latent from them. The tumbler evidently slipped out of her fingers as she set it down and it made a bad smudge of the fingerprints."

"Where is this flask?"

"I developed the latents and took it into Mr. Hupp's study. I explained the circumstances to Mr. Hupp and got him to leave his study. He gave me his key. The door is locked. I've telephoned for the department's fingerprint expert to come out and make photographs of the fingerprints."

Sergeant Mahoney seemed to be paying not the slightest attention to Millicent.

"What kind of whisky was it?" he asked. "Do you remember the brand?"

"Yes," Buchanan said. "It was rather an expensive brand of whisky. It's a brand you wouldn't expect a chauffeur to drink. It's a nine-year whisky, bottled in bond."

Without taking his eyes from her, Sergeant Mahoney said to Buchanan, "Write down the name of the brand of whisky on a piece of paper and pass it across to me. If you will please, Buchanan."

Detective Buchanan pulled a notebook from his pocket. He took a pencil and laboriously wrote a single word. Then he tore the page from the notebook and passed it across to Sergeant Mahoney. Sergeant Mahoney glanced at the word on the paper, nodded, folded the paper, and placed it on the table beside the automobile which he had previously placed there. He reached his right hand into his pocket, took out a pad of paper which he placed on the table. He held a pen in his left hand. Suddenly he got to his feet, smiled, and extended his hand to Millicent.

"Well," he said, "I'll be going."

Mechanically she gave him her hand.

Sergeant Mahoney's fingers closed over her right hand in a vise-like grip. She felt something slapped against her fingers. Then, before she could withdraw her hand, Sergeant Mahoney had snatched up the pad of paper and pressed her fingerprints against it.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Reaction From Lax Discipline Feared.

A dozen or so years ago someone discovered that good men and true had been working for decades and even centuries to uncover truths behind human behavior.

"Psychology" stormed the land. In many cases with benefit and a broader understanding on the part of the charge. In other instances the movement lost all trace of common sense and people have used it as a fad for self-expression, or misused it as a fetish—a cure-all.

Priming themselves with a few technical expressions they turned homes into laboratories that would have been burlap bags had they not been so tragic. Or turned the children loose on their own to ruin themselves.

Misinterpreted Facts

The fact that so many parents and even a few schools have misinterpreted the foundation truths of safe and sane mental and emotional guidance has had its inevitable consequence.

Disenters and I-told-you-ses, the natural leaders of the left wing are today blowing the bugles of challenge as was to be expected.

Looking at the front are the "spankers" and "whippers" who believe that man's chief end is not his head but his rear.

Another battalion is led by an insurgent writer who begins her recent article with the words, "The average child is selfish, stubborn, forgetful, cruel, illogical."

Unless I am much mistaken this new neg to hang another hobby on (with leaders already throwing out their formulas from the medicine-show) will go to extremes as idiotically as did the rabid "Freudists."

Salt Theories With Sense

If this is their opinion of all children, heaven help the off-spring of their converts.

The sensible parent will have none of it just as she or he boycotted the half-baked theories of behaviorists that endorsed uncured liberty.

There are certain bed-rock truths about children (and the things that affect them) known to sensible parents either through first-hand experience or safe and sane reading; such as the balance between love and authority; development of the child's "own" best rather than a superficial best; gratification by family life and its relationships; causes of confusion in the child's mind; encouraging

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

New Cosmetics Bring Back Pink Cheeks

New cosmetics for spring have a natural, healthy look about them. Designed with the schoolgirl complexion idea in mind, they serve to enhance rather than to distort the beauty you already have.

Pinkish or reddish rouge is better than the yellow and orange tones. Choose one that harmonizes with the color your cheeks become after you have pinched them or after you have been exercising violently. Then learn to apply it correctly.

After you have cleaned your face and smoothed on a foundation lotion, brush your forefinger lightly across a bit of cleansing cream, dip it in the cream rouge and, beginning about a quarter of an inch from your nose, make one streak outward along the cheek-bone. Go back to the starting point and make another streak downward. In other words form a triangle without a base. Then, blending carefully, fill in the triangle, leaving no rough edges and no blotches.

The powder that you use in the next step in makeup also should match perfectly the natural tone of your complexion. If you are one who has pinkish lights in your skin, don't choose a peach powder. If you have olive skin, get a powder that carries out the attractive yellowish effect. Use a clean piece of cotton each time

Be a Friend
Be a friend. You don't need money; just a disposition sunny; just the wish to help another get along some way or other; just a kindly hand extended; just the will to give or lend. This will make you someone's friend. Be a friend. You don't need glory. Friendship is a simple story. Pass by trifling errors blindly. Gaze on honest effort kindly. Cheer the youth who's bravely trying. Pity him who's sadly sighing. Just a little labor spent. On the duties of a friend. You'll have friends instead of neighbors.
For the profits of your labors; You'll be richer in the end. Gain a prince, if you're a friend.

Refrigeration
miracle fashion.
Boulder City, where all the workmen and their families live, where the offices and all general working headquarters are housed, is now the third largest city in Nevada, where only a barren plain was, five years ago.
Then the builders were ready to take out and take in materials. They took out 9,000,000 tons of rock. First, few minds can envision that. But you could build a masonry fence 2500 miles long with it.
Accomplish Huge Tasks
Then they dug more than a million cubic yards of dirt from the river bed. That's equal to a ditch 100 feet wide, 60 feet deep, and a mile long.
Pretty soon the workmen were filling up the hole they had made (they dug the dirt out, of course, to get to bedrock and have a firm foundation for the dam), and were doing it with concrete. They will have used 4,000,000 cubic yards of it when the work is finished.
With the concrete used in Boulder Dam, you could build a 20-foot paved highway all the way from Florida to California.
Of course this had to be reinforced, but a mere 35,000 tons of steel was necessary.
1000 Miles of Pipe
Cement, however, creates great quantities of heat as it hardens, so the builders had to devise a huge refrigeration system, with pipes running back and forth all through the dam. If this weren't done, the great mass would take more than 100 years to cool, and set up dangerous stresses while about it.
These pipes, and others used, totaled thousands of miles. Steel pipe alone was more than 1000 miles.
More than 165,000 carloads of sand, cobbles, and gravel had to be hauled in to be mixed with the 5,000,000 barrels of cement used.
This couldn't be mixed by hand nor could many of the other bigscale operations there be done by hand; therefore, great quantities of special machinery were used. So far, about 900

Pre-Easter Series Will Open Sunday

Rev. Mr. Holt to Hold Week's Services at First Christian

The pre-Easter meeting to be held at the First Christian church is being looked forward to with interest by many people.
Mr. Holt, the pastor, will during this meeting paint in word pictures the Christ life from the time He enters the garden of Gethsemane until He is risen from the tomb. Picturing Christ in the garden before His Father, His arrest, then the trials before Annas, Caiaphas, Pilate, and Herod, the Crucifixion, burial and the Resurrection.

The speaker will endeavor to lead his audiences into the feeling that they are witnessing these scenes as a part of the crowd which formed there in Jerusalem during these times, watching with interest and amazement and horror the persecution of the Nazarene.

The meeting will start Sunday morning April 14, at 10:50 a. m. and continue through every night of the week, closing Easter Sunday morning with a word picture of the Resurrection. The evening services will start at 7:30 p. m.

No offering will be taken during this meeting, except the regular Sunday morning offerings.

Fraternity Vice in Iowa Probed

Grand Jury Investigation May Follow in Suspension of 23

IOWA CITY, Ia.—Grand jury investigation of vice conditions in Iowa City was threatened Tuesday by County Attorney E. A. Baldwin, who charged lack of co-operation on the part of University of Iowa officials following disclosure of vice conditions on the campus, as a result of which 23 members of a national fraternity were suspended in definitely.

"I will give the university sufficient time to clear up this condition and get to the bottom of the charges," Baldwin said, "and if they do not I will call witnesses before the grand jury May 6. I know nothing of this affair until it had already been brought before the courts, and even then my co-operation was not asked."

He charged further that the action of the university, in co-operation with Mrs. Mabel Evans, county probation officer, had practically stymied him on an investigation he had been making for some time.

"For the last three or four weeks," he said, "the office of the county attorney, acting on numerous complaints, has been investigating vice conditions in some of the smaller hotels. He had already obtained warrants and would have made raids last week. We were ready for a raid last Saturday night but conditions were not right and it was postponed."

As a result of the notoriety of the university's action in suspending an entire fraternity, he said, much of his investigation had gone for naught and that all vice would subside for the next fortnight.

McGee's Only Hope Lies With Victim

Girl He Kidnaped, Alone Can Save Him From Execution

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(AP)—Waller H. McGee, who has been sentenced to hang May 10 for kidnapping Miss Mary McElroy, need his death cell Tuesday hopeful the daughter of Kansas City's city manager would "do something" in his behalf as he said she had promised.

McGee's last legal effort to escape the noose was an application for a rehearing, filed in Jefferson City Tuesday. The only other vague avenue of escape from the gallows would be clemency by Gov. Guy B. Park.

McGee, the first person ever given the death penalty for kidnapping in the United States, said Miss McElroy had visited him in jail several times.

"She told me when she came she would do what she could," he whined. "Why I treated her like a sister while I was holding out for that money."

Miss McElroy frequently has expressed sympathy for McGee and his brother, George, who is serving a life sentence in connection with the abduction.

The STORY of EASTER

The next day, Tuesday, as Jesus entered the Temple, a group of chief priests, scribes, and patriarchs approached, hoping to ensnare Him. They inquired of Jesus the nature and origin of His mission, pretending that they were competent judges of His claims. But Our Lord clearly showed them that if—as they themselves confessed—they were not able to decide whether the baptism administered by John the Baptist, was of heaven or not, He had a perfect right not to consider them competent judges of the character and origin of His own mission. To Pharisees who asked Him whether it was lawful to give tribute to Caesar, Our Saviour answered that they could not have accepted the coins of the emperor without recognizing his sovereignty and thereby declaring it lawful to pay him tribute. The Pharisees went away, dumfounded at His wisdom. Jesus next put the Sanhedrists to rout by asking them how the Messiah could be the son of David, and yet be called "Lord" by David himself. Afterward, Jesus left the Temple, foretelling its utter destruction.

down.
When work was moving fastest, the contractors had gasoline bills of nearly $50,000 a month, and tire bills of $16,000.

If you need a thumb tack for your work at Boulder Dam, you can get it from the supply house instantly. Or if you need a 20-ton truck or even a whole freight train, you can get that, too. But there is no waste, no disorder, no confusion.

It has taken as much American genius to estimate, purchase, and bring in the materials for Boulder Dam as it has actually to build the great structure.

NEXT: The men who made the dam. The fun they had. The lives that were lost. The big boss. Drama, adventure, thrills and folklore.

Prosecutor Gives Them 10 Days to Comply With Law in Prairie Co.

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—After investigating Prairie county's sale of $15,000 in bonds for what was alleged as 70 cents on the dollar, Prosecutor George Hattie of Conway said Thursday he would wait 10 days to give the county and bond purchasers time to "meet the requirements of the law."

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Attorney Thomas S. Buzbee announced Thursday he had drafted an intervention to the pending test suit on the Hall 2 per cent sales tax act, containing broad allegations on which five wholesale concerns hope to prevent the tax going into effect.

The tax is scheduled to take effect May 1.

Filene Warns NRA Must Be Upheld

Famed Boston Merchant Also Favors Proposed 30-Hour Week

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—American business men were told Wednesday by one of their most successful associates, Edward A. Filene of Boston, that they must accept NRA because America has "come upon an utterly new time" in which the "abundance must be passed around."

Testifying in the senate finance committee's NRA investigation, Filene, 60, said:

"If recovery does not come soon, we may as well get ready for whatever Dr. Townsend, Father Coughlin and Huey Long propose."

Filene, a gray-haired Boston merchant, said NRA had made mistakes over which he had "groaned" and lashed out at business for missing its opportunity to make the most of the law.

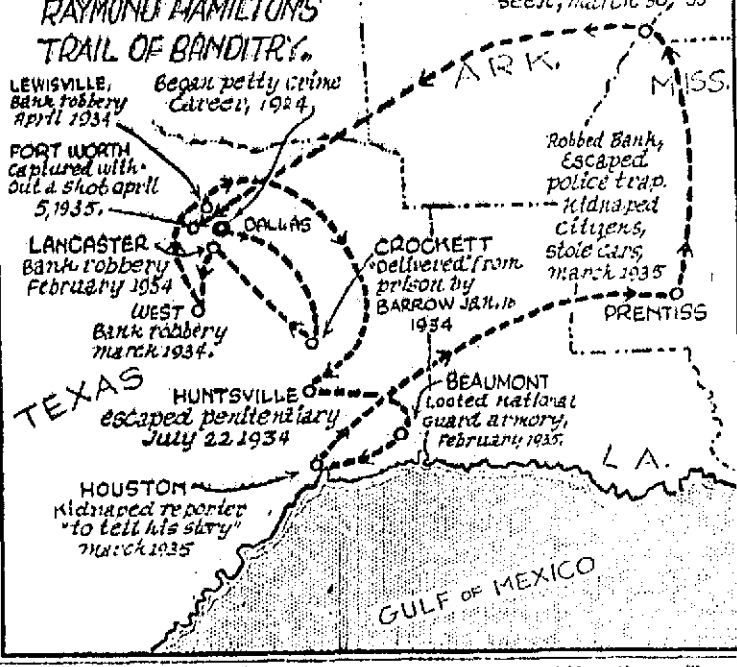

"Nevertheless, the issue now is clear. It is: Shall we keep on with this effort to organize our American life in accordance with the new economic facts, or shall we go back to the practices which landed us in this depression?"

"There was a time," he told the closely listening senators, "when business could get more if the masses got less. There was a time when the employers could make more profits if their employees got less wages; and it was during that time that most of our business men developed our theories of business."

"But that time has passed. The trouble is that the theories are still sticking around."

Half a dozen senators, who had listened only casually to other witnesses both for and against NRA, deluged Filene with questions. He said he was opposed to price-fixing. He favored a 30-hour week, though not necessarily immediately. He denied increased wages must rise prices.

Where Hamilton Spread Terror

The lurid trail of outlawry followed by Raymond Hamilton, Texas desperado, for 11 years leads again to Huntsville, Tex., state prison death house, with his capture in a Fort Worth railroad yard without a struggle. Across the territory shown in this map, Hamilton spread terror, after he was graduated from petty thievery to robbery, prison-breaks, and murder.

Dust Sifts Down

most severe of a devastating series. Crop and livestock damages, already piled high in uncounted millions, increased rapidly, principally in Kansas, Oklahoma, and Colorado. Parts of New Mexico, Iowa, Nebraska, Texas and Missouri also were hit.

The swirling clouds, which late Wednesday reached Kansas City, were viewed by R. I. Throckmorton, head of the Kansas State College agronomy department, as spelling doom for the big wheat acres in Western Kansas. He said not even rain now could check devastation in the drought-ridden section, a major source of the nation's wheat.

Many schools and stores were closed in Colorado and Kansas. The business district at Scott City, Kansas, was shut down for the third consecutive day.

Leaving Territory
More than 100 families have deserted Cimarron and Texas counties in the Northwestern Oklahoma panhandle. Chester Lamar, an FERA administrator, said that 100 "normally self-sustaining" families have left Texas county alone with in the last 30 days. The Oklahoma refugees told graphically of their distress.

"I'm trying to get some place where my children can at least live," said Mrs. Lydia Dower, of Hardesty, Wednesday as she drove away by truck with her three children for Colorado, atop the truck was the family goat.

"I had no chance to raise a crop here," explained Roy Woods, of Texhoma, as he set out for Utah.

"This farm is the fruit of my labor ever since my wife and I married 28 years ago," said T. A. Foster of Texhoma, "but we are going to leave it. Fortunately, I inherited a farm in Linn county, Kansas, where we can go."

Floyd Hudson, member of the corn-hog committee in Cimarron county, said the dust has driven out all but three of the 40 families who once lived in the six townships south of Boise City, Okla.

Nearly All on FERA
Attributing conditions to the dust, Mrs. Mabel Lathrop, relief worker at Guyton, said 4000 of the 5500 families in six Northwestern Oklahoma counties are on relief rolls.

Tom Blake, of Hardesty, Okla., lamented that "my family almost smothered to death every time there is a storm."

But the Colorado to which Blake is going also reported more dust Wednesday. The fifth dust storm in five days swirled over Lamar, Colorado, causing the dismissal of schools and the closing of stores at noon.

Every school in Baca county, Colorado, was closed. One hundred eighty school children and passengers on busses prepared to spend their second night at Pritchett, Colorado, in a school building and nearby homes.

Springfield, Colo., stores exhausted their supplies of sponges, sought as "dust masks." Trains in the region were compelled to stop frequently. One arrived 12 hours late. A truck driver required 5 1/2 hours to drive 50 miles to Lamar.

Kansas, where dust has been spinning in low-hanging clouds for more than a month, was virtually blanketed by Wednesday's storm.

Long's Parish Grab Is Upheld by Court

State Supreme Court Sustains Him in Baton Rouge Difficulty

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Within a few hours after Huey Long's political machine has suffered a rebuff in its efforts to take control of East Baton Rouge parish the Louisiana Supreme Court gave Long's followers everything they had sought.

The supreme court also granted applications of Long's followers for writs to obtain control of the New Orleans Police and Fire Departments.

District Judge W. Carruth Jones Tuesday refused to issue an order that would give Long's machine control of the East Baton Rouge Parish Jury. An appeal quickly was taken to the Supreme Court. Shortly after midnight four Supreme Court justices issued an order with a writ of certiorari prohibition and mandamus ordering the parish authorities to recognize since the house has passed a bonus bill but leaders at the capitol said they held nothing of such plans. Autright opposition from the president to the pending measure—the Patman bill which would pay the soldiers certificate with new currency—was their guess.

Despite reports that Mr. Roosevelt was dissatisfied with the slow legislative progress this session and planned to "crack down," Robinson said the president was satisfied, even though the only important administration bill to go through its work relief.

"In view of all the circumstances," Robinson said, "I feel very satisfied with the progress being made and the president assures me he has the same opinion."

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt—who opposes immediate cash payment of the bonus—Wednesday indicated to Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, that he planned a special message soon to congress on the issue.

In a genial mood after reviewing the legislative situation with the president, Robinson declined to give details of the proposed bonus message.

There was speculation that Mr. Roosevelt might offer a compromise.

5 Held on Prison Cruelty Charges

Result of Probe of Negroes Losing Feet by Freezing

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—(AP)—Four former prison camp officials and a physician were held on the felony charge of mutilation at the conclusion Wednesday of a judicial inquiry into the circumstances of two negro convicts losing their feet.

Superior Court Judge Donald Phillips held there was probable cause for action against Henry Little, prison camp superintendent; J. W. Eudy, R. C. Rapp and T. M. Gordon, guards, and Dr. C. E. McLaughlin, county physician. He ordered them held under $1,000 bonds for the Superior Court term beginning May 11. Little and the three guards also were held for County Court on charges of assault upon Ed Biggers and Oscar Cunningham.

Negro convicts, who testified they were beaten at Little's camp in the dead of the night.

Who buys your shirts and socks?

More than 80% of all men's shirts, stockings, underwear, neckties and handkerchiefs are purchased by women. Why? Men prefer to have their wives and mothers do the shopping because they realize that women are better shoppers—that they have a sixth sense for qualities and values.

How do women keep themselves informed? They have formed the habit of reading the advertisements in the newspapers. And they read them regularly, whether they want to buy anything or not. Then they know exactly where to go to purchase what they need, and they know to a penny just what they will have to pay.

From the advertisements any one can learn where to buy better clothes, better foods, better household goods, better everything. Read them carefully. They have news and suggestions for you!

Accuse Memphis Municipal Judge

Shelby County Machine Has Opposition Judge Indicted

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—City Judge Lewis T. Fitchugh was indicted by the Shelby county grand jury Wednesday on Mayor Watkins Overton's charge that he participated in a city court "fine remission racket."

Two indictments returned by the jury also named Charles Walsh Sr. and Julian M. Cohen, attorneys, and W. L. Clark, former city court clerk. They were charged with conspiring to "steal this money."

All but Clark, who was in Arkansas on business, made bond immediately. Judge Fitchugh's $3,000 bond was signed by Martin J. Condon, A. K. Burrow and W. C. Johnson, business leaders.

Judge Fitchugh issued bench warrants Tuesday for Police Inspector Joe Hewitt and fined Police Chief Will D. Lee $10 for contempt when he refused to serve them. The warrants accused Hewitt of driving while intoxicated, reckless driving, assault and battery and leaving the scene of an accident. Judge Fitchugh said the offenses occurred March 21, 1933, but were not made public by police officials.

The warrants for Hewitt had not been served Wednesday. City Attorney Will Gerber contending they were not properly drawn. Judge Fitchugh held no court Wednesday, because of the funeral of Judge Harry B. Anderson of federal court. He said he would be on the bench Thursday to try Hewitt "but I don't think he will be there."

The police, he charged, "will continue to try to cover it up (the case) and suppress it."

Chief Lee said he would not serve the bench warrants as written and that he does not intend to pay the $10 contempt fine.

Overton's city administration and Judge Fitchugh came to light three weeks ago when Mayor Overton announced Clark's resignation as city court clerk, charging that Clark, on oral instructions from Judge Fitchugh, remitted many fines after court hours. Judge Fitchugh assumed responsibility for the remissions, saying they were made in worthy cases after investigations where "justice and mercy" were involved.

work and relief before July, 1936. President Roosevelt set out in a series of conferences Wednesday to draft a tentative division of funds.

Heads of governmental spending agencies were called into the workroom of the president in the executive offices. They went over with Mr. Roosevelt plans for expanded activities.

A lump sum estimate of what they can give in the next fiscal year was given. The president asked for more complete plans, and details of specific projects.

The president stressed that it would be some time before the work has progressed to the point of making definite allocations to projects. There is hope among presidential advisors that the work can be started in a broad-scale on half a dozen or more different fronts at once. They hope to reach a peak about the middle of November.

Senate Proposals Unlikely

White House officials disclosed that the division of the $4,000,000,000 was not likely to follow entirely the divisions proposed by the senate. President Roosevelt said it had been found that more than $600,000,000 would be needed to carry the Civilian Conservation Corps through July 1, 1936.

After the president has canvassed the field entirely, it was indicated he would set up the Advisory Board which would set up the Advisory Board which would meet with him to go over project proposals.

Mr. Roosevelt said the greater part of the spending would be done by existing agencies.

The president said that so far as possible employment would be provided in the vicinities in which the jobs are located so as to avoid the additional expense of building homes for the workers.

Meanwhile, what was taken as an indication of the gradual shifting of the direct relief burden for unemployed back to the state came from Harry L. Hopkins in the announcement that states and communities would contribute $563,775,000 to relief in 1935, and increase of $154,883,000 over the last year.

States Must Take Over

The relief administrator said the increase was the result of agreements worked out between the relief administration and the states. In a majority of cases, now, the state and local money has been definitely allocated for relief purposes, either by legislation or executive action.

Nine states have not made available the funds required by Hopkins and allocations for the entire month of April have not been made. Hopkins said "arrangements are pending, with the expectation that they will be completed soon," the states are: Florida,

Moratorium for Florida Favored

Lower House Adopts 2-Year "Debt Holiday" by Vote of 86 to 5

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—(AP)—The house Wednesday passed, 86 to 5, a measure declared a two-year moratorium on public indebtedness in Florida with a provision that courts may order by mandamus tax levies for payment of bonds only on a basis of ability to pay.

The bill was immediately certified to the senate. To prevent possible recall of the measure, the house tabled a motion for reconsideration of the vote by which it was passed.

The measure declared that "a public emergency and crisis exists throughout the state, endangering public health, welfare, safety, morals, comfort and convenience" and that "the tax paying ability of the citizens has been materially and seriously diminished and in many cases virtually disappeared."

Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Missouri, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

The following list of states shows first, the 1934 contribution, and second, the 1935 allotment:

Alabama: $893,000; state has appropriated $3,000,000 and localities are expected to provide $500,000.

Tennessee: $584; legislature considering $2,500,000 state appropriation, Louisiana: $415,000; legislature has authorized local levies expected to produce $2,400,000 for unemployed.

Arkansas: $885,000; state appropriations expected to yield $1,500,000; localities expected to provide $1,000,000.

appeared." The moratorium provision was: "That the courts of the state shall not for a period of two years enter and pre-emptory writ of mandamus or by any other proceedings require payment upon interest and principal due upon bonds and other evidence of indebtedness by counties political subdivisions municipalities or taxing districts for a sum greater than a found by the court to be reasonable and said levy shall in no case exceed the tax-paying ability" of the debtor unit.

The effect of the measure is to vest courts with discretion as to the amount of tax levies which may be ordered.

A survey of public funded debt of Florida governmental units, made recently, showed $49,337,387.48 of bond principal outstanding on December 31, 1934, and this, $54,431,430.45, was in default. In addition, interest due and in default totalled $40,179,094.48.

Swears He Paid Long's Lawmaker

And U. S. Asks Lawmaker to Account for It on Income Tax Return

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—Sworn testimony was given by a witness at the income tax trial of state Representative Joseph Fisher Wednesday that he paid the Jefferson parish lawmak-er $300 in cash in July, 1932, to "have a bill favorably reported out of a committee" of the Louisiana legislature.

The witness, Sam George, a former resident of New Orleans who now resides at Bay St. Louis, Miss., was subjected to a sharp cross-fire of questions by the defense, but stuck to his testimony.

George was produced by the government in an effort to show that the $300 he said he paid Fisher for the "legislative favor" made up a portion of the defendant's income for 1932.

George's appearance on the witness stand climaxed a day in which the government placed much additional evidence into the record.

Patient Turns the Tables on Dentist

Dentist Pulling Tooth, Patient Pulls Dentist Out of Chair

NEW YORK—A Washington Heights dentist was thrown out the window of his operating room Wednesday by a patient while he was preparing to extract a molar from the left side of the jaw and was administering gas. Fortunately, the window was on the first floor, and the dentist was not hurt seriously.

The patient, a burly Irish individual, threw the Jewish dentist out of the window with his right hand and threw the gas machine out of the window with his left hand, and then jumped through the window himself. When all three were outside, the patient went after the dentist and tried to throttle him. He was subdued by several astonished citizens.
